Newsletter No. 164

Hi Everyone,

Our last newsletter for 2016. We know that everyone enjoyed their Christmas day this year. Christmas is still a day of rest – except for those that are catering/hosting the family lunch or dinner. It is still Christmas where we take a rest, a breather and look around. Most times we are pleased with what we see, we know that we could do more to help others, especially the younger generation. We are thankful that we live in Australia where real poverty is not known. Many of us have been that busy by the time Christmas arrives, we are exhausted – nearly collapsing into a heap (or that is what life feels like). At Christmas, we realise 7 more days (1 week) and 2016 will end and a new opportunity will present itself in the form of a new year - 2017.

What will 2017 bring us? The weather we cannot control or accurately predict – 2016 again showed us that fact. I believe it is up to each of us to make 2017 something special – not just for ourselves, but for our families and our communities. We will always achieve much more working together in a team than struggling as an individual to make a difference.

In 2017 there again will come many changes, perhaps challenges. But much, the basics of life will not change. Our life revolves around time – 24 hours to each day. This does not change – it may seem like it does, but the fact is a day is still 24 hours. Just the same as it was 2000 years ago. What makes the difference is how you spend your time – your 24 hours. A basic human trait is we desire to do better – each day we obtain satisfaction. Not from money, but from being a better parent or just being a better person.

To all our staff both present and past, thank you for helping to make Dawmac the business it is today. To our customers also, our gratitude for your support and loyalty – thank you to 2016 for all it gave us. Cheers to 2017 for the opportunities it presents.
